MACMILLAN & CO., 112 Fourth Avenue, New York.

ON THE BORDER WITH CROOK.

By Captain JOHN G. BOURKE, U.S.A. Illustrated. 8vo, $3.50.

A valuable and picturesque record of active army life on the frontier during the past twenty years. Captain Bourke was on Crook's staff, his warm personal friend, and familiar with his Indian policy, the remarkable success of which is here told. The work is a vivid picture not only of our wars with the Sioux and Apaches but of the unique type, traditions, customs and adventures of the "border" which is now a thing of the past.

ACROSS RUSSIA.

From the Baltic to the Danube. By Dr. CHARLES A. STODDARD, editor of the New York Observer. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

An experienced traveller and careful observer, the author has pictured most graphically the people, customs, art and institutions, and the many phases of life in Russia.

ELSKET,

And Other Stories. By THOMAS NELSON PAGE. 12mo, $1.00.

Mr. Page's new volume contains the stories written since his popular "In Ole Virginia" appeared, and will add to his already high reputation as a delineator not only of Southern life and character, but of transatlantic types.

THE DIVORCE OF CATHERINE OF ARAGON.

The Story as told by the Imperial Ambassadors resident at the Court of Henry VIII. By JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE. 8vo, $2.50.

This work is the ripe fruit of Mr. Froude's later studies in a field which he has made particularly his own, and is the result of the great amount of new material now accessible, which the author claims only confirms his well-known views. While written to supplement his "History" the narrative is a most fascinating one, and will be widely read for its own interest.

STORIES FOR BOYS.

By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.00.

Every boy who is a lover of healthy, manly out-of-door sports will be deeply interested in this collection of stories by the author of "Gallegher." Mr. Davis gives rattling and exciting stories of base-ball, foot-ball, tennis, yachting and other contests full of snap and dash.

THE BUSINESS OF LIFE.

A Book for Every One. By the author of "How to Be Happy though Married," "The Five Talents of Woman," "Manners Makyth Man." 12mo, $1.25.

"The author has the art of brightening his pages with a constant play of humor that makes what he says uniformly entertaining."—Boston Advertiser.

PATRICK HENRY:

Life, Correspondence and Speeches. By WILLIAM WIRT HENRY. With portrait. Eleven hundred sets printed from type. 3 vols., 8vo, net, $12.00. Vol. I. Now ready.

These volumes form the authoritative and only complete biography of the great Revolutionary agitator and statesman. The work is the result of many years' labor on the part of the author, Patrick Henry's grandson, and is based largely on documents and data discovered and collected by him. The interest of the book is not merely biographical, however, but extends to the "times" of its subject, of which it gives a full and fresh history.

THE HIGHTOP SWEETING,

And Other Poems. By ELIZABETH AKERS. 12mo, $1.25.

Containing fifty poems, chiefly lyrical. They present a notable union of simplicity and skill, and will appeal to readers of every degree of literary culture.

THE TESTS OF THE VARIOUS KINDS OF TRUTHS.

Being a Treatise of Applied Logic. By JAMES MCCOSH, DD., LL.D. 12mo, $1.00.

This volume expounds the elements of philosophy, metaphysics and logic to those who may not have time or taste for all the technicalities.

WILL PUBLISH WEDNESDAY, 28th :

Venetian Life.

By WILLIAM DEAN HOWE'S Holiday Edition. With colored illustrations (aqua-tints) from original designs by Childe Hassam, F. Hopkinson Smith, Rhoda Holmes-Nicholls and Ross Turner. 2 vols., 12mo, bound in the Venetian colors, white and gold, with slip covers in the style of "Marble Faun," $5.00.

This delightful work is brought out for the holidays in a style at once novel and artistic. There are eighteen full-page drawings, all original water-colors by leading water-color artists who have lived in Venice, some of them for many years. The illustrations for this book are reproduced directly from the artists' paintings, and preserve the spirit of the originals as well as their form and color.

The work is bound in Japanese cloth made to order, and the ornamentation of the cover is from a design by Mrs. Whitman. The Venetian colors, white and gold, are used in the binding, and a slip cover of old gold completes and crowns the whole.

Land of the Lingering Snow.

Chronicles of a Stroller in New England from January to June. By FRANK BOLLES. 16mo, $1.25.

An engaging book, giving an account of walks to Arlington Heights and other points in Old Cambridge and in Boston, the Ipswich Dunes, Mt. Wachusett, the Concord and Sudbury Rivers, Mt. Chocorua and Highland Light. They describe the scenery and mention the trees and flowers observed; speak of the birds noticed on the way, their habits and songs; and record the impressions and thoughts which such leisurely tramps in scenes and circumstances so delightful would naturally inspire.

Three Tales.

By WILLIAM DOUGLAS O'CONNOR, author of "Hamlet's Note-Book," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

Three remarkable stories form this volume—"The Brazen Android," an historical romance of London in the time of Roger Bacon, who with Simon Montfort figures prominently; "The Ghost," a Christmas story located in Boston and teaching an impressive lesson of charity; and "The Carpenter," one of the most famous and touching Christmas stories ever written in this country. All three tales are told with great spirit and glow with a generous love of freedom and justice.

Persia and the Persians.

By S. G. W. BENJAMIN. With portrait and many illustrations. New Edition. Small 4to, price reduced to $3.00.

A new and less costly edition of an instructive book based on Mr. Benjamin's observations and experiences while United States Minister to Persia in 1882-83.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE SCIENTIFIC PUBLISHING Co., 27 Park Place, New York, have in press Dr. Peter's work on "Modern American Methods of Copper Smelting."

THE WORTHINGTON Co. has just ready "Memory's Sketch-Book," an attractive gift-book with designs in purple tints, by Helen P. Strong, and "Buds and Blossoms," a brilliantly-printed color-book for young people, by Lucie E. Villeplait.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "Men of Iron," a stirring romance of the Middle Ages, written and illustrated by Howard Pyle. The story is especially adapted to young readers, and with the illustrations, which are numerous, presents a faithful picture of life and manners in England five hundred years ago. They have also just ready "The Antigone of Sophocles," with introduction, notes and appendix by Prof. Milton W. Humphreys, of the University of Virginia.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS will have ready short editions of the "Revised Bible," printed on their wonderful "Oxford India paper," so thin that the entire Bible measures scarcely three-quarters of an inch in thickness, and yet of such opacity that the print does not show through from one side to the other. They will print these Bibles in ruby and minion type and bind them in Turkey and Levant moroccos, limp, with round corners, red under gold edges, calf-lined and silk-sewed, making exquisite little sixteenmo and demy octavo books.

ESTES & LAURIAT have just published an admirable book on Florence by Virginia W. Johnson, entitled "The Lily of the Arno; or, Florence, Past and Present." In the beautiful Flower City of Italy, so attractive to Americans, there is an endless amount of historic folk-lore, an abundance of which the author has delicately interwoven with descriptions of the cathedrals, the campanile and the Florentine people, making an interesting and instructive book. The volume is illustrated with twenty-five photo-etchings from photographs of points of interest in Florence.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish next week Howells' "Venetian Life" as a holiday book, in two volumes, beautifully printed and illustrated with colored pictures of Venetian scenes. These are by our best water-color artists, and are reproduced with remarkable accuracy and fidelity to the spirit of the originals. At the same time will appear "Three Tales," by W. D. O'Connor, including a striking historical romance of London, entitled "The Brazen Android;" "The Ghost," a Christmas story of Boston; and "The Carpenter," a notable Christmas tale. Frank Bolles, of Harvard, has a book of jaunts to and careful observations in picturesque spots of New England, which he calls "Land of the Lingering Snow." Dr. Holmes adds "A Mortal Antipathy" and "Pages from an Old Volume of Life" to his beautiful Riverside Edition; and S. G. W. Benjamin's "Persia and the Persians" is brought out in a very expensive style.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just issued the first volume of "The Life, Correspondence and Speeches of Patrick Henry," by his grandson, William Wirt Henry, a work based on a great deal of material not accessible to his first biographer, William Wirt. The work will be completed in three volumes, and will be an adequate authoritative and definite biography of a revolutionary patriot whose romantic figure and attractive personality made him the idol of the popular imagination. The book is beautifully made and dedicated to all true lovers of civil and religious liberty. They have also ready "The Divorce of Catherine of Aragon," the ripe fruit of James Anthony Froude's later studies in his special field. The story is given as told by the imperial ambassadors at the Court of Henry VIII., and is a fascinating narrative written to supplement his "History of England." Richard Harding Davis' "Stories for Boys" are also ready, and contain rattling and exciting stories of baseball, football, tennis, yachting, etc., full of snap and dash.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Arabian nights (The) entertainments; adapted for American readers from the text of Dr. Jonathan Scott; with introd. by W. Elliot Griffis. [Library ed.] Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. 4 v., 37+469; 4+522; 4+593; 5+571 p. il. D. cl., $6.

A new edition of this classic, carefully printed from new type, richly bound and illustrated with over forty full-page pictures. The introduction was especially prepared for American readers by the editor, Rev. Dr. Griffis, an accomplished Orientalist.

Argles, Mrs. Marg., ["The Duchess," pseud., now Mrs. Hungerford.] A little rebel. N. Y., National Pub. Co., [United States Book Co., 1891.] 2-121 p. D. (Red letter ser., no. 90.) pap., 25 c.

Armstrong, Jessie. Dan's little girl. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1891. 256 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.20.

Baird, A. J., D.D. The world and how to take it: with a sketch of the author's life by J. M. Gaut. Nashville, Tenn., Cumberland Presb. Pub. House, 1891. c. 18+376 p. por. sq. D. cl., $1.50.

A biographical sketch is given of the author, who died in 1884 after a long, useful life as pastor, chiefly in the West and South. He starts from the standpoint, "This is a good world—exactly such a one as we need," and by bright practical talks tries to foster a spirit of contentment in all who call themselves Christians.

Banks, L. Albert, D.D. White slaves; or, the oppression of the worthy poor. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892 [1891.] c. 4-327 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The larger part of the matter here given was originally delivered in a series of discourses from the pulpit of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, South Boston. The pastor tried to make a plea for justice in behalf of the crushed and often forgotten victims of greed, who work and starve in their cellars and garrets rather than beg or steal. He points out the plague of the "sweat-shop," the relation of wages to morals, the temptations of working people, evils of tenement-house life, and the terrible worship of the god gold in modern society.

Bardeen, C. W. The taxpayer and the township system: an address delivered July 2, 1891, before The State Teachers' Association of New Jersey. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1891. 15 p. O. (School bulletin pub.) pap., 25 c.

Bardeen, C. W. The teacher as he should be: an address delivered July 8, 1891, before the New York State Teachers' Association; and with slight changes, July 21, 1891, before the Chautauqua Assembly. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1891. 19 p. O. (School bulletin pub.) pap., 25 c.

Berdoe, E. Browning's message to his time; his religion, philosophy and science. 2d ed. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 6-180 p. 16°, cl., 90 c.

Bergen, Fanny D. Glimpses at the plant world. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892 [1891.] c. 4+156 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Neither an elementary botany nor a mere botanical picture and story book. Meant rather to serve for reading for children of from nine to thirteen years, to develop the child's powers of observation, and to serve as an introduction to the study of botany. In the first part of the book there is a series of brief sketches of forms of plant life, representative of the grand divisions of the vegetable kingdom. In the second part the parts of the flower are described.

Besant, Walter. St. Katherine's by the Tower. N. Y., National Pub. Co., [United States Book Co., 1891.] 3+377 p. D. (Red letter ser., no. 86.) pap., 25 c.

figures to portray single sounds, or by inverting letters, or by modifying some of the common letters.

Bible. Old Testament. The book of Psalms; according to the authorized version metrically arranged, with intros., various renderings, explanatory notes and index. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1891. 280 p. 16°, cl., $1.40.

Bible light on mission paths; or, topical Scripture studies prepared for use in missionary meetings of women and young people and in monthly concerts. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1891.] c. 2-192 p. D. pap., 30 c.

Only the simplest and most obvious interpretation of Scripture is attempted. The topical readings are on Christian giving, missionary prayers, earnestness, liberality, etc. The second part contains lessons to be read responsively, and there are several prayers to be offered in concert.

Bixby, Ja. Thompson. The crisis in morals: an examination of rational ethics in the light of modern science. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. c. 2-315 p. S. cl., $1.

Part I. gives ten chapters to a critique of Herbert Spencer's "Data of ethics," which the author thinks Herbert Spencer's best friend must consider the weakest volume in his "Synthetic philosophy." Part II. treats of the positive reconstruction of ethics on the basis of evolution and scientific knowledge, and makes a systematic declaration of the outcome of the principles of evolution in its highest field—the motives and rules of human conduct. The author is Doctor of Philosophy in the University of Leipzig.

Title signifying "Wings of the lark" is given to a collection of sixty short poems handsomely printed on pages with wide margins, decorated with many pretty designs.

Bourke, J. G. On the border with Crook. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. 13+491 p. pors. il. O. cl., $3.50.

The author, Captain in Third Cavalry, U. S. A., was for more than fifteen years intimately associated with General Crook during service on the border "after 1875. In this volume he has collected descriptions of the regions in which the greater portion of Gen. Crook's Indian work was carried on; the people, red and white, with whom he came in contact; the difficulties with which he had to contend; and an analysis of the principles guiding him in his justly famous intercourse with the various tribes—from British America to Mexico, from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean. Gen. Crook died in March, 1890, having been in active military service forty years.

Butterworth, Hezekiah. The Christmas book; il. by W. L. Taylor, Edmund H. Garrett, F. H. Lungren, and others. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. 119 p. O. cl., $2.

Contains a few stories, as "How Dot heard 'The Messiah'" and "Good luck;" several historical sketches, namely, "Christmas in the Catacombs," "The vision of Constantine," "The Christmas crowning of Charlemagne," "The coronation of William the Conqueror," "In the cabin of the Mayflower," etc., and a few poems also relating to Christmas. Illustrated with full-page and text pictures and richly bound in lavender-colored cloth, with silver and gold ornamentation.

Califf, Jos. M. Notes on military science and the art of war. 2d ed. Wash., D. C., Jas. J. Chapman, 1891. c. 180 p. D. cl., $1.

Prepared in an abbreviated form for use in a course of lectures delivered to the senior class at the State University of Iowa. The author is first lieutenant in the Third U. S. Artillery. The aim is to teach how armies are organized and their affairs administered, how men are handled in actual war and about the material employed, guns, ammunition, torpedoes, explosives. In this edition two chapters are added on transport and reconnaissance and the facts about small arms, powder and all military material are revised to date.

Carey, Rosa Nouchette. Mary St. John. N. Y., National Pub. Co., [United States Book Co., 1891.] 407 p. D. (Red letter ser., no. 88.) pap., 25 c.

Carpenter, Edmund Janes. A woman of Shawmut: a romance of colonial times; il. by Frank T. Merrill. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1891. c. 5-234 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The pretty tale opens in the village of Roxbury, just outside of Boston, and a realistic word picture is given of a Massachusetts colony in 1640. Penelope, the woman of Shawmut, longed so much for the beautiful things that come with riches that she gave up her faithful lover Ezekiel and married Governor Richard Bellingham. Many historical characters are described. An appendix gives the accurate dates and explanations of incidents introduced. A charming picture of life four centuries ago.

Dalin, Talmage. European relations: a Tirolese sketch. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1891. c. 4+206 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 9.) cl., 50 c.

Mrs. Berg, her nineteen-year-old daughter Natalie and her young son Fritz, after the death of Mr. Berg, are invited by his brother to go to the Tyrol and visit at the ancestral home of the von Felsenburgs. Their sojourn among the beautiful scenery of Tyrolean Alps is worked into a pretty story. Natalie has a great love of investigation and folk-lore and hunts up many of the ancient traditions of Tyrolean towns, which she weaves skilfully into stories for her young brother. A typical Austrian officer, after many rebuffs, becomes the hero of the young American girl's heart-history.

Gordon, Julien, [pseud.] for Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger.] Vampires; Mademoiselle Réséda. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 2-299 p. D. cl., $1.

The first story opens with a wonderful description of second-class boarding-house life in New York City. The red-haired boarder, Paton, soft-hearted and sympathetic, is completely taken possession of by an intriguing mother and a sickly daughter, who prove the "vampires" of his short life. Mademoiselle Réséda is a penniless, ravishingly beautiful governess who makes some of her sister women's lives uncomfortable for a time. This story first appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Gray, E. McQueen. Elsa: a novel. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1891. 3+600 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., extra, no. 711.) pap., 50 c.

Elsa, the beautiful daughter of an Austrian nobleman, has a magnificent voice. In Venice an old friend directs her attention to this gift and introduces her to a great maestro, who teaches her and befriends her through her artistic career. In Munich she finally makes her début in a new opera, which she makes a success. The intrigues of the stage, the narrow-mindedness of little German nobles, the old traditions of celebrated German cities, and a tender love-story are all woven into quite an ingenious plot.

Hope, Anthony. Father Stafford. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 4+251 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 87.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Father Stafford is an Anglican priest who, broken down by unremitting mission work and an uncompromising ascetic life, comes to a rich English country-house to recruit by invitation of his former school friend, the young lord of the manor. He has taken a vow of celibacy which does not hold out against his love for Lady Claudia. A talented artist and Father Stafford have conversations on art and religion of the present day which are full of important truths. Father Stafford is forced to submit to the logical consequences of his theories, and in time join the Roman church.

Keats, J. The poetical works of John Keats: given from his own editions and other authentic sources and collated with many manuscripts; ed. by H. Buxton Forman. 3d ed. enl. and rev. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. 3 v., 28+199; 200+420; 421-597 p. D. cl., $4.50; hf. cf., $7.50; ½ cf., $9.

The plan of revision of this edition, first issued in 1884, has been the same as with the author's edition of Shelley, namely: to gather together everything he could find from the hand of the poet, and to establish the text as near as possible in accordance with what the poet wrote or meant to write. The present—the third—edition has been considerably revised from new material recently found.

Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1891.] 81-91 p. O. (Publications of the American Acad. of Political and Social Science, no. 34.) pap., 50 c.

The paper gives a vivid though rapid sketch of the actual character of a Russian village, which touches the rest of the world only when the few Jewish traders come to it to take provisions in exchange for their wares. Each is the serf of all, and escape to the city, for reasons which are explained in the paper, offers no relief. At a time when the great empire is driving Jews from their homes it will be of general interest to learn something of its own industrial and political unit.

Harry Graham, by reckless speculation, loses his own and his wife's fortunes, a calamity which Mrs. Graham bears in a seraphic manner that must have been a great comfort to Mr. Graham. John Winthrop was the stern lawyer that drove the Grahams to the West to retrieve their fortunes. The nature of his defeat and the pefections of Mrs. Graham bring the story to a satisfactory end. New York City and Paris are the scene.

The author has sought to utilize all sources of modern information founded on exploration and scientific research. His subject, always a speculative one, has engrossed the time and talents of learned men in all generations, and there are any number of volumes purporting to be intelligent guides to the leading facts and dates of the history of the ancients. The book is filled with chronological tables and statements, all calculated to settle vexed questions and furnish solutions to some of the problems presented in ancient history. The book bears evidence of deep study. The writer's purpose is to show that monumental discoveries agree with history as told in the Old Testament.

McDougall, Walter H. The hidden city; il. by the author. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 2+321 p. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 88.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Begins with a discussion between some miners at Evans Gulch, California, as to whether there are still undiscovered places in the United States. A balloon comes down among them, from which steps a man who is in need of daring men to go with him in search of a friend. This young man had just sent word by carrier-pigeon that he had dropped from a balloon among natives of the hidden little city of Atzlan, who were still as barbarous in an age of telephone and electricity as in the stone age. The superstitions and cruel practices of this little city on the border land of Mexico are fully described. The balloonists finally reach their friend and organize a paying land scheme.

Dodd, Mead & Co., 1891. 7+324 p. pors. il. map, D. (Great explorers.) cl., 75 c.

The name of John Franklin is identified with arctic research. The several search expeditions sent in quest of the courageous explorer achieved valuable geographical and other scientific results which would not have been reached had he not furnished the necessity for their undertaking. The author introduces the personal element in his portrait of Sir John as a skillful sailor, ardent explorer and able administrator. His authorities were few, chiefly logs, journals and other documents in the Public Record office. He received much assistance from Miss Sophia Cracroft, the talented niece of Sir John Franklin.

The little ladies are twin girls left motherless when five years old. They are the only children of the young Earl Claremont, who leaves England for a long time after his wife's death. "Nesta" and "Nona," as they are called, are left to the care of their aunt, whom they call "Sweetheart." Their childish pranks fill the volume. Miss Bob, the governess and the "Gas-man" are excellent characters and most amusing.

Mitchell, Ellen M. A study of Greek philosophy; with introd. by W. Rounseville Alger. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1891. c. 28+282 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A charming exposition, discussing the character and source of the Greek philosophy, showing whence came the beginnings of Greek religion and culture. The earlier schools of thought, including the Pythagorean, the Eleatic, the Atomistic and others leading up to the great school of the Sophists, receive critical treatment; short biographical sketches of their principal exponents being given.

Molesworth, Mrs. Maria Louise, ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] Nurse Heatherdale's story; il. by L. Leslie Brooke. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 191 p. S. cl., $1.25.

Four little English children are sent into the country with a nurse who is very cross to them. She deserts them abruptly one day, and "Nurse Heatherdale" takes her place. She goes back to London with the children and lives with them many years. She tells the stories of their young lives.

Moltke, Count Helmuth von. The Franco-German war of 1870-71; tr. by Clara Bell and H. W. Fischer. N. Y., Harper, 1892 [1891.] 10+432 p. por. map, O. cl., $3.

Field Marshal von Moltke began this history in the spring of 1887 by special request, and finished the part of the work covering the Franco-Prussian war within a year. His purpose was to give a concise account of the war, but he involuntarily contemplated the task from his own standpoint as Chief of the General Staff, and his work is practically, from beginning to end, the expression of a private opinion of the war by the man out of whose brains had been evolved the plans which secured victory to the armies of his country. The object has been to keep the tone popular. Von Moltke is acknowledged by authorities both in Germany and France to be impartially just in his statements of the campaign which welded Germany into an empire. The appendix deals with certain features and personal experiences of the Austro-Prussian war of 1866. The London Times pronounces this "the most masterly precis of a campaign in military literature."

Morris, C. King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table: a modernized version of the "Morte Darthur." Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 3 v., 256; 256; 255 p. S. hf. cl., $2.25; hf. cf. or hf. mor., $6.

The "Morte Darthur" is a collection of some of the earliest legends of Celtic Britain. The romantic and chivalric deeds of King Arthur and his knights have been the inspiration of many masterpieces of literature. The "Morte Darthur," in its original form, however, is not easy or attractive reading to other than special students of literature. Its style is confused and monotonous and it sadly lacks background. All these deficiencies Mr. Morris has supplied, making a most charming collection of romantic stories that old or young may enjoy.

Morris, Harrison S., ed. In the Yule-log glow. In 4 v. V. 1-2, Christmas tales from 'round the world. V. 3-4, Christmas poems from 'round the world. Phil., J. B. These four dainty little books contain a charming collection of Christmas stories and poems. The first and second volumes are devoted to the stories, which are taken from the French, German, Russian, Italian, Norwegian, etc., and which offer a vivid picture of how the Christmas holidays are celebrated in these far-off countries, as do several American and English stories illustrate the day in this and the mother country. The third and fourth volumes are exclusively poetry—an almost complete collection of the best poems on Christmas in the English language. There are two editions of these little books, one with photogravures and one without—both are equally dainty in appearance and detail.

Morris, Harrison S., ed. Where meadows meet the sea: a collection of sea-songs and pastoral lays; il. by F. F. English. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892 [1891.] c. 300 p. O. cl., $3.50; hf. mor., $4; ¾ cf., $5.

A compilation of some of "the sweetest and noblest" of the sea-songs of our modern poets. Not only have the works of the older school of poets—the Brownings, Longfellow, Swinburne, Tennyson, Shelley, Keats and Walt Whitman been laid under contribution, but specimen poems have been taken from the poets of the younger circle, embracing Rudyard Kipling, Charles Henry Luders, John Arthur Henry, Richard Watson Gilder, the editor Harrison S. Morris and others. The selection is fresh and altogether new, evincing a fine appreciation of the best. The book is attractively sent out as to paper, print, binding, etc.

Morris, W. The story of the Glittering Plain which has been also called the Land of Living Men or the Acre of the Undying; written by W. Morris, reprinted in fac-simile. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. 3+187 p. O. bds., $2.50.

Gotten up in imitation of an old missal with peculiarly cut type and artistic initial letters, the work of the author also. Hallblithe of the House of the Raven loves an exceeding fair damsel of the House of the Rose, and is to be wedded to her on midsummer night. Suddenly Hostage disappears, and in his search for her Hallblithe comes to the Glittering Plain, the House of Ransom, the Land of the Undying. He learns many new views of life and the true value of soul and body in quaint conversations with the inhabitants of these lands, but finally safely returns to Cleveland-by-the-Sea with his pretty Hostage, who settles down to become the mother of the best of men and fairest of women. Several poems are introduced into the allegory.

 "The railway man" was John Rowland, who had begun life in Scotland as a foundry boy. When the story opens in India he is a millionaire and a celebrity and a widower with a grown boy and girl in Scotland, who he has not seen for seventeen years. He offers himself to Evelyn Ferrance, a middle-aged woman of good family who has lost both friends and fortune. The story deals with this marriage and Evelyn's relations with her step-children, who have been brought up by an ignorant Scotch aunt, and are in consequence lacking in culture and full of prejudices against herself.

The author is professor of jurisprudence in the University of Leipzig, and has written his church history from the standpoint of a lawyer. The translator has preserved everything of value to an American reader which the original contains and has added much which was barely mentioned. The supplementary and explanatory notes and the chronological tables are also supplied by him. The preface gives an important bibliography of works consulted for the material added.
- Solms-Laubach, H. Graf zu. Fossil botany: being an introd. to palæophytology from the standpoint of the botanist; authorized English tr. by H. E. F. Garnsey; rev. ed. by I. Bayley Balfour. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 401 p. il. 8°, cl., $4.50.
- Souvestre, Emile. A workman's confessions; from the French. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1891. c. 2-194 p. D. cl., 80 c.
Souvestre excelled in delicate description of the minutæ of daily life. The workman here tells of the trials and pleasures of his life, his love, marriage, fatherhood and plan of making his children useful and happy. The details of home life among the working classes are very touching; and the picture he draws of himself and his wife in old age surrounded by their children is inspiring and helpful.

Tilden, J. N., M.D. A commercial geography for academies, high schools, and business colleges. Bost., Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, 1891. c. 187 p. O. cl., $1.

The author aims to bring within the scope of a textbook information on the routes and growth of commerce, the production centres and the markets of the world, waterways and railways, the staple articles of commerce, their relative value and importance. The need of such a book has been felt in the Military Academy at Peekskill, and the author hopes the material he has brought together for the boys under his care will give other students some ideas of the magnitude of the world's production, by showing the interdependencies of nations for the necessities as well as the luxuries of life.

Tim is a little boy living alone with an old family servant in England. His father is an officer in India; his mother is dead. Tim is eight years old before he makes his father's acquaintance. His father's unreasonable demands for affection and Tim's reserve make these two people, when they finally come together, very unhappy. Tim is sent to school, and a good picture is given of a boy's life at Eton.

Winchester, Boyd. The Swiss republic. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 2-487 p. map, O. cl., $2.

Based upon notes of studies and observations during four years of diplomatic service in Switzerland, made, at the time, with eventual publication in view. "There is no attempt," Mr. Winchester says, "to treat the subjects embraced, or rather touched upon, in any historical sequence, but, by brief hints and random suggestions, to seize the principal and interesting features of the country and its institutions, the people and their characteristics."

Winslow, Margaret. The boy convict of Bermuda. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1891.] c. 3-301 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A lad, unjustly accused of poaching and burglary and convicted through treachery and perjury, is sent to the Bermudas a convict for life. His hard lot works out to his good; for under the labors of a true chaplain he learns to love Christ, and at last is released from his sentence thoroughly exculpated of the charges which brought him there.

Winter, J. Strange, [pseud. for Mrs. H. E. V. Stannard.] In luck's way. [Also] Moth-Mullein, by S. Baring-Gould. N. Y., J. W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co., 1891.] c. 3-294 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 173.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Ted Brown, a ragged crossing-sweeper, gets into luck's way when he meets Effie Staunton, the rich ward of the rich merchant Legros. Miss Effie goes with her lover to visit Ted and his sister, feeds and clothes them, and finally discovers a secret which makes her little protégés of new interest. With this is bound Moth-Mullein, Baring-Gould's pretty story of a fiery girl who married Dicky Duch to spite her other suitors and insisted on extravagances that made her little husband most unhappy.

With the birds; selected poems from the best English and American authors; il. by Giacomelli, Gascoigne and Scannell. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. unp. O. cl., $1.50.

A companion poem to "Grandmother Grey," published last year. An old man's reflections on olden times, illustrated with delicacy and power. Printed on fine cut paper and richly bound in two colors, with gilt ornamentation.

Woolsey, Sa. C., ["Susan Coolidge," pseud.] In the High Valley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. c. 288 p. il. D. (Katy-did ser., no. 5.) cl., $1.25.

The "High Valley" is in Colorado, where Lionel Young, a young Englishman, had a share in a large cattle ranch. The story opens in Devonshire, England, with Lionel at home for a visit, but soon about to return to Colorado, bringing his sister Imogene with him. In the High Valley, Clover Carr, one of the charming heroines of the series, is again met. She, it will be remembered, married an Englishman, Geoffrey Templestone, who also owned a ranch.

Wordsworth, C. Annals of my early life, 1806-1846; with occasional compositions in Latin and English verse. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1891. 8°, cl., $5.

Xenophon. The retreat of the ten thousand; being the story of Xenophon's Anabasis, by Prof. C. Witt; tr. by Frances Younghus-band; preface by H. G. Dakyns. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1891. il. maps, pl., 8°, cl., $1.25.

Yourell, Agnes Bond. A manless world. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1891. c. 4-169 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Arthur Fielding tells his uncle, an old pessimist of seventy years, that he is going to marry. The old man warns him of the risk he runs and tells him a theory he has formulated, that sooner or later man will vanish from the earth and all life cease. The earth in her whirl through space will come in contact with certain gases, which will destroy the principle of life on which rests all human progress. The picture drawn of the gradual decay of man and his institutions fails to deter the young nephew from his matrimonial plans.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 24, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The next important reason is that the Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY forms the basis of "The American Catalogue" and so the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING. V.

THE ARRANGEMENT AND CARE OF STOCK.—IV.

ONE of the greatest enemies of books is dust. If books can be kept in glass cases, provided with sliding doors hanging on brass rollers, they will be more safely protected against injury and will not so readily become shelf-worn. Many dealers, however, wish to exhibit the books they have in stock to better advantage than by keeping them under glass. Wide-awake dealers want the visitors to their store to have access to the stock, and are pleased to have the books looked over and examined by intending purchasers. For this reason it is best to provide glass cases only for gift-books and books in fine bindings, leaving the rest of the stock free from these barriers. Books seem to collect more dust than any other merchandise, and it becomes quite necessary to dust them very frequently. Cleanliness is a most essential feature in a bookstore, and nothing can be more disgusting than to offer a dusty book to a contemplating purchaser, especially if this happens to be a lady. There is no relief from this constant dilemma except to be on guard and fight the dust daily. Recently a most excellent down-duster (see figure 4), having almost the shape of a spade, has been introduced (manufactured by C. D. Babcock, 25 Ann Street, N. Y.), and gives perfect satisfaction. The entire stock must be cleaned daily, or at least every two or three days, with the aid of a good duster. If one of the above dusters is used it is comparatively easy to gain access to every corner, and it will do the cleaning better than feather dusters, because the dust adheres to it and can be carried outdoors. Besides, one is not obliged to take the books down from the shelf. It is unavoidable, however, to take all books from the shelves about every three months, giving them a thorough cleaning, either on the sidewalk or in the yard. Then they should also be newly arranged and put in alphabetical order. There is no other way to keep your stock clean and neat, and to prevent the dust from injuring the books, causing them to become shelf-worn and unsalable. One thing is well worth observing—viz., to sprinkle the floor freely with water every morning before sweeping. Whoever is so fortunate as to enjoy a hard-wood floor will best do away with sweeping altogether, having the floor washed up every evening or early in the morning. Considerable dust can be kept out of the store if the doors and windows are kept closed on very windy days all the year round, except while it rains or when the streets are covered with snow. A single windy day will bring more dust inside your store than would otherwise be collected in a fortnight. When closing the store in the evening, be sure to have all counters and tables on which merchandise is exhibited covered with sheeting, which is not to be taken off in the morning until the store has been thoroughly swept. Stores should have a high ceiling, so as to permit the warm air to collect in the unoccupied region above, where no books can be injured by heat. The shelving should never be made to reach clear up to the ceiling, as the bindings of books, especially those of sheepskin, will decay within a year or more. Hot air spoils leather bindings more quickly than constant use of the books.

Gas is also very injurious to books, and the introduction of electric light is in this respect a great relief. Though not generally known, it is a fact that gaslight quickly spoils the binding and appearance of books, while the electric light has none of these drawbacks.

Not a few books are also spoiled by exposing them directly to the sunlight. Books that have delicate colored bindings should not be put in the show-window or exposed to the sunlight, even indirectly, if the fading of the binding is to be avoided. Keep books of this kind, as well as all other books in fine bindings, covered with a piece of good manilla paper, folded in around the covers. On the back, where the title of the book is, cut with a sharp knife an opening in the paper, just large enough to allow the title to be read. There are quite a number of bookstores in existence that have not a single volume in stock which does not show traces of being shelf-worn. Many dollars are lost through carelessness in this direction, which might be saved if the books were properly cared for.

"BUTLER'S BOOK" IN COURT.

THE C. F. JEWETT PUB. CO. recently applied for an injunction restraining Gen. B. F. Butler and the firm of A. M. Thayer & Co. from advertising or publishing "Butler's Book." They state that Gen. Butler entered into a contract with them to publish his autobiography, which was to be copyrighted in their name. Gen. Butler furnished them with a part of the manuscript and afterwards took it back and refused to fulfil the contract. Gen. Butler, it is said, claims that Mr. Jewett, with whom he made the original contract and who subsequently got into financial difficulties, had broken faith with him, and gives that as the reason for taking the book out of the firm's hands. The publishing company, on the other hand, claim that they are not affected by Mr. Jewett's misfortunes and are ready to fulfil their contract. Accompanying the prayer for the injunction was a copy of the agreement between Gen. Butler and the Jewett Publishing Company, which provided, among other things, for the supply on the part of the General of "copy" enough each day for the making of two pages of printed matter, except in case of sickness or inability. The manuscript was to be typewritten and was to be revised and corrected by the General himself.

In case of the death of Gen. Butler, or his inability to conclude the work, he named James Parton, of Newburyport, as the person whom he wished to finish the book. In case of death before the book was finished the General's estate was exempted from liability. He, however, agreed to defend any suits which might arise against the firm publishing the work, on account of any statements contained therein, and in return was to receive 37½ cents for each book sold, and twice that amount for each book printed.

The firm was to sell the book on subscription and to take all necessary steps towards advertising it throughout the United States.

The case came up for its first hearing before Judge Lathrop on the 20th inst., but no decision was rendered. The final hearing as to the merits of the case will come off on or about October 27.

A CHANGE IN THE FRENCH COPYRIGHT AGENCY IN NEW YORK.

EDWARD BRANDUS, of the firm of Brandus & Co., publishers, 30 Broad Street, N. Y., and the son of the senior member of the firm of Brandus & Co., music publishers, Paris, it is reported, has signed a contract with the Comte de Keratry, President of the French Copyright Society, by which the Brandus firm become the sole and exclusive agents of the society in this country for the next twenty years. This society, it will be remembered, is an amalgamation of the "Society of Men of Letters" and the "Society of Authors and Composers" which in July opened an agency at 208 Fifth Avenue, New York.

The change is expected to give rise to some complications, inasmuch as a number of dramatic managers hold that the jurisdiction of the French society is obligatory upon its members only in France, and that they are at liberty to make independent arrangements with publishers and managers in this country.

Under this new arrangement Mr. Paul Meyer, who has been the representative and secretary of the French Copyright Society, now consolidates his office with Brandus & Co. Both Mr. Hastings, Mr. Brandus' business partner, and Mr. Meyer are of the opinion that their business will be largely that of selling the right to print books, and not so much in the way of manuscripts, especially plays.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE VIRGINIA BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION.

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 20, 1891.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: I suppose you and most of our friends think that because you have not heard from us (the Virginia Booksellers' Association) for a couple of months that we, as an association, have gone the way of most such organizations; but if you could see the mail of our secretary you would change your mind, for he receives letters from members of the trade in nearly every Southern and central State besides those from our members throughout Virginia.

Most of our members have been so busy since the middle of August with their school trade that they have had little time for talk or action as an association, but we have seen enough to find out that some publishers on whom our committee called last July have carried out every promise made, while others have done exactly the reverse—have failed to keep any of the promises made, going so far even as to deny having made any.

We want to accomplish our aims without making trouble or enemies, but if we cannot reach our ends in a peaceable way we will make a fight that will be felt throughout the book trade, and the publishers will gain or lose according to the stand they take towards the Association.

Think of an association of business men addressing a letter in July to a firm (at their request) with whom every member of the Association does business, and not receiving a reply before October 20, if it ever receives one at all! Does any man expect us to stand such treatment? The booksellers have been standing such treatment, and sometimes much worse, but will they continue to do so? I think not; not if they are men worthy of the name; for publishers can no more do without the bookseller than the bookseller can do without the publishers. A few think they can and will continue so to think until taught otherwise.

Booksellers of the South are at last awakening and demanding their rights; California dealers are doing the same, and soon every State will follow. Let the dealers in every State organize as State Associations, admitting only legitimate booksellers. Let these devise ways and means to correct local differences and evils, according to the suggestion made by Mr. A. M. Robertson in your issue of August 22. Let the State Associations appoint delegates to a convention to organize a General or Inter-State Association, for the movement must be general and represent a large number of the trade before we can accomplish some of the many things that we hope to accomplish. Virginia, North Carolina and Alabama now have associations. Tennessee will have one before many days, and Mississippi and California are moving in the same direction.

I hope no one will "size me up" as wanting to wage war on publishers, for I do not. Many of my best friends are among them; and, strange as it may appear, some of the most prominent publishers will be found in hearty sympathy with us on nearly every practical point. They say, "Form your associations, agree among yourselves as to what you want, lay out definite plans in a few words, present them to the publishers with strength enough behind you to justify us in making the changes desired, and you will find us willing and anxious to help the work on, for we see and feel the evils as much as you do." Here are three points that I personally want to see corrected. Whether our Association will endorse them or not will be seen after our next meeting:

1. Text-books listed at just prices to publisher, dealer and consumer, a fair discount to legitimate dealers and no one else.

2. Miscellaneous books at a much lower list, closer discounts, leaving a fair margin, without room for cutting, to the legitimate trade only.

3. Editorial copies sent out on a different plan than at present; either direct to the papers for notice or divided among the trade in each place, and not as is now done, to one house in a locality where there are several dealers.

This method of procuring credit for books sent to the press for the one house preferred discriminates against the other dealers in a way that is considered very unjust. Does the publisher sell one dollar's worth more by such a process? I think not. Is the big house of to-day the same that the publisher knew ten or even five years ago? Or has the publisher any guarantee that it will always remain the same? I am not referring to any individual or locality in particular, but, having been thrown much together with dealers from many States and cities during the past summer, I find this same evil exists nearly everywhere in this country.

In conclusion—for this is already twice as long as I intended it to be—let me impress upon dealers in every State that it is of no use working for reforms as individuals. They cannot accomplish anything in that way. Let each State organize into an association and you will soon see good results, and soon a National Association will become a real, living, working factor for the mutual good of every legitimate handler of books, be he publisher, jobber or retailer—in fact, every one now handling books except dry-goods fakirs and book-butchers.

Yours, etc., H. M. S.

"HUCKLEBERRY FINN"—AN EXPLANATION.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16, 1891.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: We notice in a recent issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY an advertisement offering our $1.00 edition of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" at 55 cents net. This surprises us, because we have steadily refused to fill small orders at better than 40 %, and our lowest discount has been 40 and 10, allowed on lots of not less than 500.

Had the gentleman in inserting the advertisement purchased a 500 lot from us, he might have been contented to offer them at a profit of one cent a book, but as we have not sold to him, it is plain that to avoid serious loss the books must have been secured by an exchange through some party purchasing from us at 40 and 10. We fully recognize the fact that having come into the possession of these books he has a perfect right to dispose of them in what manner and at what prices he pleases; at the same time his offer is calculated to produce the impression that we have changed our rates of discount and in justice to ourselves and to those to whom we have already sold, we desire to say that the discounts above mentioned have been and will be steadily maintained by us. CHAS. L. WEBSTER & Co.

OBITUARY NOTES.

EDWARD R. YOUNG, of the firm of E. & J. B. Young & Co., died suddenly on the 19th inst., at the age of 38 years. Mr. Young was a son of Edwin Young, the senior of the firm of which he was a member. He was a widower, without children, and lived with his father at 427 W. Twenty-first Street, New York. He was a fine-looking man of athletic proportions, genial and winning in his manner, and a general favorite among his many friends and acquaintances. He was a member of the 7th Regiment Veteran's Club, the Republican Lodge, 694, F. & A. M., American Yacht Club, and the Manhattan Athletic Club.

WE regret to hear of the death of Frederick G. Huber on the 7th inst. at New Brighton, Staten Island. Mr. Huber was born in Newark, N. J., March 20, 1858, and began business life as entry clerk with Koch, Sons & Co. in 1873. The following year he became cashier for the Western News Co., where he remained until 1876, with the exception of a couple of months, during which he held a position in the Michigan Central Railway Company. In 1876 he returned to New York, taking a position with Koch, Sons & Co., of which his brother, E. E. Huber, is general manager. A short time after his return to New York he took a position with E. Faber as entry clerk, and in 1878 he took charge of the gold pen department, which position he held up to the time of his death. Mr. Huber was a conscientious worker and one of the most promising young men in the trade. Almost the last thing he did was the preparation of the recently-issued illustrated catalogue of the firm, a work which reflects credit on his taste. His bright, gentlemanly presence will long be missed by his many friends. He leaves a wife and three children besides his two brothers and an aged mother.

WE regret to announce the death of Mr. Henry G. Pinn, for many years secretary of the Religious Tract Society of London. As secretary he had entire charge of the business department, and was widely known among the many patrons of the Religious Tract Society. The office will now devolve upon Mr. F. G. Sargent, who will perform the duties of the former incumbent.

ROBERT COOKE, for many years a partner in the great house of Murray and a shrewd literary adviser, died recently in London, his funeral having taken place on the 16th inst.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the London Athenæum: "Mr. James McKie, the Kilmarnock printer and bookseller who has just passed away at a good old age, was a worthy successor in business to the John Wilson who, in 1786, published 'Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect, by Robert Burns.' To Mr. McKie himself was denied the privilege of introducing another Burns to the world, but he presented it with a perfect fac-simile of the poet's first volume, and with more than one admirably edited collection of the complete works, besides compiling a model 'Bibliography' on the sure foundation of his own unequalled collection of Burns and Burnsiana, now happily housed in the local 'Burns Museum.' But Mr. McKie was more than a worthy specimen of the dying race of bookish country booksellers, and more than a builder of the tombs of the prophets, for he wrote capital verses of his own in the genuine language and manner of his idol. Some five-and-twenty years ago he gave me a little bundle of the chap-books in which they had a large local circulation. The earliest has a wrapper on which is printed 'Odd Time. A selection of original Poetical Varieties by the author of "The Real Souter Johnny." Published periodically in numbers at 1d. each. No. 4. Maybole: Printed by M. Porteous, 1836.' The latest has a copy of verse dated 1863. It is to be hoped that the 'Burns Annual' promised for the New Year will contain some adequate notice of this remarkable man and a selection from his spirited rhymes."

JAMES PARTON, the famous biographer of so many of his noted countrymen, died at his home in Newburyport, Mass., on Sunday, October 18, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Parton was born in Canterbury, England, but came to this country when he was only five years old. He attended a public school in New York City until he was twelve, and then went to the then well-known school conducted by John Swinburne at White Plains. He remained there for seven years, and acquired an ardent love for literature and the languages. On completing his studies there he was enabled, through a legacy, to visit Europe, where he devoted his time to study and reading. On his return to this country he went to Philadelphia, and with the Rev. Samuel Edwards started a school modelled after Prof. Swinburne's, for which Mr. Parton entertained a high regard. His first published literary work was an essay on "Jane Eyre," giving his reasons for judging that "Currer Bell" must be a woman. This he sent to N. P. Willis, at that time in the zenith of his popularity as editor of the Home Journal. Mr. Parton soon discovered that his talent lay in the direction of biography. He has written the lives of Horace Greeley, Aaron Burr, Benjamin Franklin, Andrew Jackson, Thomas Jefferson and Voltaire, and biographical articles on "General Butler in New Orleans," "The Words of Washington," "Famous Americans of Recent Times," "Noted Women of Europe and America," "Men of Business Who Did Something Besides Make Money," and "Captains of Industry." He was a very busy man and contributed to many magazines. His writings on "The Humorous Poetry of the English Language from Chaucer to Saxe," on "Taxation of Church Property," "Caricature and Other Comic Art in all Time and Many Lands," "Smoking and Drinking," "Instruction of Rings, Railroad and Political, and How New York is Governed," are all full of healthy humor and free American spirit. He was also the editor of "Le Parnasse Français," one of the best collections of French poems, covering from 1550 to 1877. He was first married to the sister of N. P. Willis, "Fanny Fern," who died in 1872. In 1876 he married Miss Eldridge, the daughter of his first wife. Since 1875 he lived at Newburyport. He was a vigorous worker for copyright.

HENRY PETERSON, the well-known author and publisher, died in Germantown, Pa., October 10. Mr. Peterson was born in Philadelphia December 7, 1818, and was, early in the forties, identified with the Saturday Evening Post as editor, and in 1848, with Edmund Deacon, became publisher of it. After 1857 he became sole owner. About fifteen years ago he retired from business. His published works are: "The Twin Brothers," "Poems," "The Modern Job," "Pemberton; or, one hundred years ago," "Fairemount," "Casar, a Dramatic Study," and a volume of poems. He was also the author of a number of plays. His latest work was a drama called "Columbus," completed just before his death.

GILBERT BECKETT, eldest son of the late Gilbert Abbott Beckett, one of the earliest members of Punch's staff, and himself a contributor for twelve years, died last week. He could write lyrics by the yard, and turned out one of the best modern libretti, "The Canterbury Pilgrims."

REV. DR. GEORGE DIEHL, one of the editors and proprietors of the Lutheran Observer, died in Frederick, Md., October 15.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

DAVENPORT ADAMS' "Dictionary of the Drama," announced nearly ten years ago, is likely to be published this fall.

DR. W. J. ROLFE is preparing a Shakespeare "Word-Book," a one-volume abridgment of Schmidt's Shakespeare Lexicon, with some revision.

HENRY HARLAND, who has written so much and so well under the nom-de-plume of "Sidney Luska," seems to have tired of the sobriquet, and is now using his own name upon his literary efforts.

THE women writers and journalists of London propose to form a club to be called "The Writers' Club." Mrs. Stannard (John Winter) presided at the preliminary meeting, and temporary premises are to be taken in journalistic headquarters, the Strand.

G. S. GOMME is writing a work on "Folk-lore and Ethnology," which will contain a complete statement of his views as to the functions of folk-lore as a means of ethnological research, and as to the principles to be applied in the scientific analysis of custom and belief.

ANDREW LANG, in preparing the new edition of the "Waverley Novels," will have the advantage of access—granted by Sir Walter's great-granddaughter—to all ms. and other material now at Abbotsford. He will supply a preface and notes to each volume.

BERLIN papers report that Dr. P. Hinneberg, the learned editor of the seventh volume of Ranke's "Weltgeschichte," has obtained a two-years' leave from the Royal Library, where he acts as assistant librarian, for the purpose of collecting in France, on behalf of Prof. Sybel, materials for a history of the war of 1870-71.

CHARLES G. LELAND is preparing for the Adventure Series, published in this country by Macmillan & Co., a volume on the adventures of James P. Beckwourth, mountaineer, scout, pioneer and chief of the Crow Indians. He has also in press a new poem. It is entitled "Magonia."

WE understand, says the Evening Post, that Mr. Goldwin Smith has enlarged and recast in the form of a biographical essay his two reviews of the "Life of William Lloyd Garrison" in Macmillan's Magazine on the successive appearance of the two halves of the work in question. The book, which will still be of moderate compass, will appear shortly.

HALL CAINE's new romance, "The Scapegoat," says the London Athenaeum, seems to have touched the feelings of the English Jews during its appearance in the Illustrated London News. Through Dr. Adler, the Chief Rabbi, they have addressed to him an invitation to visit Russia, together with a companion familiar with the country and the language, in order that he may study the Russo-Jewish question on the spot. The first edition of "The Scapegoat," in two-volume form, was entirely exhausted by subscription.

PROF. CHILD is revising his well-known essay on Chaucer's grammar and metre, by Dr. Furnivall's print of the Harleian MS. 7334 of the "Canterbury Tales," inasmuch as he first worked on the late Thomas Wright's edition of that ms., which occasionally altered the scribe's words and forms. The Professor has also got six other American Chaucerians to undertake the six other texts of the "Tales" in Dr. Furnivall's "Six-Text" edition, and the essays on them are to be published in 1900, the quincentenary of Chaucer's death.

WOLCOTT BALESTIER, the young American writer who has collaborated with Rudyard Kipling in the novel "The Naulahka," which The Century will print, is at present a resident of London, where he represents an American publishing house. He was born at Rochester, N. Y., less than thirty years ago, and he has lived and attended school there and at Baltimore, Washington, New York, Vermont and Denver. His college is Cornell and he studied law at the University of Virginia. He was at one time on the editorial staff of the Rochester Post-Express.

MR. DALY AND THE DUKE OF MANCHESTER'S BOOKS.—There is a good story told concerning the book-loving aspirations of the American comedian, Mr. Augustin Daly, and the late Duke of Manchester. The story, as related by the London correspondent of the Echo de Paris, is that three years ago Mr. Daly was browsing in the Duke's library and lovingly handling the almost priceless books. The Duke watched him and saw the genuine appreciation he displayed, and when Mr. Daly heaved a deep sigh as he reluctantly laid back the volumes on the shelves, his Grace generously begged him to accept an armful. In vain the actor protested; the Duke persisted, and Mr. Augustin Daly possesses today a most remarkable two score or more of these books.—London Star.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE leading serial story in the Atlantic Monthly for 1892 will be "Don Orsino," by F. Marion Crawford.

Harper's Young People announces a "World's Fair" for boys and girls, in which no less than 4000 prizes are offered. The prizes include a bicycle and a library of 100 volumes, while not a few of even the lesser prizes are worth from $8 to $20. Every boy and girl is entitled to compete.

A NEW magazine, named The Californian Illustrated Magazine, will be issued monthly after the December number at 1170 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal. It is a magazine of general literature, and its prospectus for the year, not yet issued, is said to be of interest not only to readers on the Pacific slope, but to those of the world. National questions, social problems, sports and fiction, will all be represented by well-known writers. The October number contains articles on Los Angeles, the Mount Wilson Railroad, folk songs of the South, California climate, making rain, etc. It is very neatly printed.

The Bookman is the title of a new monthly journal just issued by Hodder & Stoughton, of London. It is intended for bookreaders, book-buyers and booksellers. The first issue, dated October, contains in addition to news notes and reviews a number of interesting and readable literary articles, such as "The Carlyles and a Segment of their Circle," "Burton at Damascus," "Thomas Hardy's Wessex," "The Work of Rudyard Kipling," "Paternoster Row Forty Years Ago," "The Provincial Dailies: Their Present Position," etc., and a "Young Authors' Page." In this page, mss. submitted for judgment will be classified under headings, with an occasional note. As a supplement this issue contains a fine portrait of Lawrence's Tennyson engraved on steel.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GINN & Co. have in press "Short Courses of Reading in English Literature," by Prof. C. T. Winchester, of Wesleyan University.

JOSEPH J. LITTLE, of J. J. Little & Co., printers, New York, has been nominated for Congress in the Twelfth New York District.

W. D. BOYCE, of the Saturday Blade and the Chicago Ledger, has brought suit against G. P. Rowell & Co. to decide the question whether the publisher of a newspaper directory has a right to guess at the circulation of any newspaper and print it.

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish shortly Part VI. of the "New English Dictionary," which has been ready for some months. The forthcoming part will contain matter especially interesting to Americans under "Congregational," "Congress," "Conepatl," "Colin," "Cockle," etc.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co. will shortly publish "A Practical Treatise on the Manufacture of Perfumery and Toilet Soaps," translated and edited, from the German of Dr. C. Deite, by William T. Brannt, author of "A Practical Treatise on the Manufacture of Soap and Candles."

D. C. HEATH & Co., Boston, will issue in November Herbart's Allgemeine Pädagogik, translated by Henry M. Felkin, of London, and edited, with an introduction, by Oscar Browning, author of "Educational Theories." This book is not a mere text-book of pedagogy, but shows the intimate connection between ethics, psychology and education.

EMILE ZOLA's much-talked-of story, the title of which, literally translated, means "The Smash-Up," will be published by the Cassell Publishing Company, who have just closed arrangements with M. Zola's agents to that effect. The author considers this the most important story that he has ever written, and he wishes his literary status to be measured by it.

THE United Typothetæ of America, an organization composed of the proprietors of printing establishments, began its fifth annual convention at Cincinnati October 20, with 300 delegates present. A. H. Pugh, of Cincinnati, is President; Everett Waddey, of Richmond, Va., Corresponding Secretary; and W. L. Becker, of St. Louis, Recording Secretary.

THE WRITER PUBLISHING CO., 186 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., has just published "Memories and Fancies," a book of the collected poems of Laura Garland Carr. Mrs. Carr, who lives in Concord, N. H., has been a contributor to the newspapers and magazines, and many of these poems were originally published in the Boston Transcript, Boston Journal, and the publications of the D. Lothrop Co.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. have ready this week "In the Yule-Log Glow," edited by Harrison S. Morris. These four dainty volumes have a special Christmas interest, as they embrace stories and poems entirely devoted to the subject of Christmas. While two volumes are devoted to stories of various nations, two others furnish a nearly complete compendium of the best English poems on the subject of Christmas, selected with rare appreciation and judgment.

WOMEN IN THE BOOK BUSINESS in the city of New York, according to the World, are prospering, at least so far as salary is concerned. Miss Griggs, employed by a Fifth Avenue publishing house, sells books on commission and clears $1200 a year. Miss Abrahams, at Brentano's, Miss Lynch, until recently at Denning's, and Miss Kinnear, at Macy's, hold responsible positions in the book departments of the above houses and each derive the comfortable sum of $1000 or more per year.

THE Dunlap Society has nearly ready to issue to its members an account of "The Private Life of William E. Burton," by William L. Keese, author of the authorized biography of the comedian-manager. This will be followed towards the end of the year by a reprint from the pages of the Gentleman's Magazine (the American Gentleman's, which Burton edited in Philadelphia) of Burton's memoirs of the elder Wallack. The secretary of the Dunlap Society is now Mr. William Carey, No. 33 East Seventeenth Street, New York; and for an annual subscription of $5 members receive three publications every year.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have just issued "The Caliphate: its rise, decline and fall," by Sir William Muir. The work deals with a period of history full of interest and very little known. The rapid spread of Mohammedanism after the death of its founder is traced in detail, the picture is drawn of the caliphate in the height of its splendor and power, and the book closes with the analysis of the causes that led to its final fall. The well-known lectures of Dr. Cheever on the "Pilgrim's Progress," formerly published by John Wiley & Son, will in the future be issued by the Fleming H. Revell Company. The volume will appear in new binding and is promised in about three weeks.

THE BOWEN-MERRILL CO. have just issued the first series of "Studies, Literary and Social," by Richard Malcolm Johnston, made partly out of selections from class lectures at the Peabody Institute, Baltimore, and partly from articles contributed to many periodicals during the last twenty years on such subjects as George Eliot's "Married Women," Shakespeare's "Tragic Lovers," "The Delicacy of Shakespeare," "Pre-American and American Philosophy," etc.; and also a neat little volume of "Neighborly Poems," by our old friend James Whitcomb Riley, whom we hardly recognize under the name of Benj. F. Johnson, of Boone. His poems are on friendship, grief and farm-life.

THE Historical Printing Club of Brooklyn, N. Y., has just reprinted its second Revolutionary orderly book, viz., that of the Maryland Loyalist Regiment. This was kept by Capt. Caleb Jones from June 18, 1778, to October 12, 1778, and comprehends the evacuation of Philadelphia, the march across the Jerseys and the cantonment on Long Island, where the book was ultimately found. Its value lies in its supposed uniqueness so far as Loyalist regiments are concerned, and in its preserving Gen. Howe's orders after July 5. Mr. Paul Leicester Ford has edited and annotated this record. The most eminent name in the list of officers is that of Philip Barton Key, uncle of the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. make a most important literary announcement in the International Library of Fiction. The books in this library are all copyright books, and will be sold at the low price of one dollar per volume, except in such cases where the unusual length of the story will make a higher price necessary, but this will not be often. The volumes will be bound in a uniform cover of tasteful design, and will be made up of entirely new and original works of fiction. Among those writers with whom arrangements have already been made and whose names are guarantees for the popularity and excellence of their work, are Clark Russell, Conan Doyle, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Parr, J. M. Barrie, S. Barling-Gould, François Coppée, Stanley J. Weyman, Mrs. Molesworth, Maurus Jókai, Emilia Pardo Bazán, Austin Dobson, Paul Bourget and B. Perez Galdos. The inaugural volume of the series will be "The Story of Francis Cludde," by Stanley J. Weyman, the author of that most powerful story, "The House of the Wolf." Some of the most distinguished American authors, whose names will soon be announced, will also contribute to this series.

D. APPLETON & Co. have nearly ready in their series of Good Books for Young Readers W. O. Stoddard's Indian story, "Little Smoke." Mr. Stoddard needs no introduction as a writer of Indian stories. Inasmuch as the Sioux are the most important and, in some respects, the most interesting of our Indian tribes, the publishers have been anxious to give the author every aid which could be obtained from illustrations. Mr. F. S. Dellenbaugh, who has spent much time among the Western Indians, has drawn twelve spirited full-page illustrations. In addition to these there are two full-page portraits of Indian chiefs and over seventy head and tail pieces representing the homes, weapons, domestic implements, and, indeed, almost every object which is closely associated with the life of the Sioux. There are portraits of Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other chiefs whose names have become familiar to our public. The book is therefore a museum of Indian curiosities, as it were, as well as an Indian picture-gallery, and it is believed that the expense and trouble connected with the preparation of so elaborate a work will be amply justified by its reception. They have nearly ready in their well-known Town and Country Series "The Johnstown Stage, and Other Stories," a fascinating book of Western life by Robert Howe Fletcher, the brilliant novelist of the Pacific coast, whose work is becoming familiar to readers of The Century and St. Nicholas.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY have, in addition to their announcements we noted in our issue of September 19 and 26, a very handsome gift-book prepared by Maude Humphrey, entitled "Ideals of Beauty," which contains six large fac-similes of water-color sketches by this deservedly popular artist, representing ideals of feminine beauty, so successfully reproduced that they can hardly be distinguished from the original water-colors. These fac-similes are accompanied by appropriate selections from the best poets, with delicate vignette illustrations in black and white by various artists. It is a large folio attractively bound. The publishers also add eight new volumes to their Vignette Series: Tennyson's "Maud," illustrated by Charles Howard Johnson; "A Treasury of Favorite Poems," edited by Walter Larned and illustrated by Joseph M. Gleeson; Kingsley's "Water Babies," illustrated by Frederick C. Gordon; Bulwer's "Last Days of Pompeii," illustrated by Joseph M. Gleeson; two volumes of "Arabian Nights," illustrated by Thomas McIlvaine; and two volumes of "Tennyson's Complete Poems," illustrated by Charles Howard Johnson. To the Handy Volume editions will be added Grace Aguilar's famous stories, "Home Influence" and "A Mother's Recompense," which will be sold in sets only, four volumes to a box; Mrs. Charles' "Schönberg-Cotta Family" and other novels, Disraeli's novels, etc., of which all the new titles were enumerated in the classified list in the Fall Announcement Number under the headings Fiction or Poetry and Drama. A work full of interest and beauty for every lover of Tennyson will be "Through the Laureate's Country," with text by Alfred Church and illustrations from drawings by Edward Hull. The additions to their art department are unusually attractive. Among their novelties are "At Your Service," by Francis Day, representing a pretty maid awaiting her orders; "The Choir Boys," by Mrs. J. Pauline Sunter, representing fourteen choir boys in their surplices with a background of flowers and stained-glass window; "The Cup that Cheers," by Charles Howard Johnson, representing a lady in evening dress taking a cup of tea; "Now I Lay Me," by Mrs. J. Pauline Sunter, representing twelve tiny maidens kneeling and saying their evening prayer; and four capital pictures by Maude Humphrey, entitled "Four Little Darkies," "Four Little Japs," "Four Little Musicians" and "Little Fairies." These are all fac-similes of water-color drawings and remarkably well done. The plain prints are put in a plain mat and the remarque proofs, of which there is only a limited edition on water-color paper, are put up in a torchon map. Among other additions to this department are "Remarque Artist-Proofs of Water-Color Fac-similes," a collection of seventeen proofs in a portfolio; "McVickar Pictures," twelve sketches of society life, by H. W. McVickar; "Mother Goose Pictures," by Maude Humphrey; sketches of scenes from "Mother Goose;" and six exact reproductions in reduced size of the works of Fra Angelo.

MRS. WALFORD's next novel will be entitled "A Pinch of Experience."

WILLIAM HEINEMANN will shortly issue an illustrated volume of "Stray Thoughts," by Miss Ellen Terry.

THE annual meeting of the [Canadian] Booksellers' and Stationers' Association will be held at the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, on the 28th.

A BIOGRAPHY of Queen Victoria in Sanskrit, recently translated into Malagam verse by eleven poets, is described as marked by "a poetic splendor of no mean order."

CHAPMAN & HALL, the publishers of Dickens, announce a volume entitled "A Week's Tramp in Dickensland," together with personal reminiscences therein collected, by W. R. Hughes, the biographer of Constance Naden. It will be illustrated by F. G. Kitton and others.

HUTCHINSON & Co., London, announce for immediate publication, "The Life of E. L. Blanchard, with Reminiscences," by Clement Scott and Cecil Howard. They have also in press Joseph Hatton's new novel, "The Princess Mazaroff: a romance of the day."

W. H. ALLEN & Co., at the time of their reported failure, had in press "Events in the Taeping Rebellion," a work based upon mss. copied in the handwriting of General Gordon. It is edited by Mr. Egmont Hake, who has added a biography and also an introduction explaining the relations between the foreign powers and China during the rebellion.

A COMPLETE critical edition of Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte Darthur" has just been brought out by Dr. H. O. Sommer, Ph.D., a German scholar. The work is in three volumes. The first contains the text, the second matter explanatory of the text, and the third a series of studies on the sources from which Malory drew his romance. After an immense deal of labor and research, Dr. Sommer, it is said, has been able to find chapter and verse for the greater portion of the "Morte Darthur."

"PICK-UPS."

THE book-worm generally reads at a snail's pace.

A SIGN in a London coffee-house reads: "Gentlemen who are learning to spell will please use yesterday's paper."

AN English hangman keeps a little store in which he sells newspapers. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!" He is a "noose"-man in two senses!
